

The Department of Slavic Languages and Literatures at the University of Toronto is accepting applications to MA/PhD programs for Fall 2023. Both programs are fully funded (covering tuition and fees and providing a living stipend).

Zoom open house to introduce the programs and answer questions: Monday, December 5, 2022 at 4pm EST. Register here:

https://utoronto.zoom.us/meeting/register/tZModeGrqjwpHtThnj7_DAOLE77375Sa5THp

Deadlines:

Dec. 16, 2022 to complete online application form

Jan. 13 2023 to submit supporting documents and references.

Our programs cover a broad range of cultures and disciplines encompassing Russian, Polish, Ukrainian, and South Slavic languages and cultures. Our research strengths include Russian literature and culture of the eighteenth century, the Golden Age (including Pushkin, Gogol, Dostoevsky, and Tolstoy), the twentieth century (modernism and avant-garde, samizdat and socialist realism, émigré literature, film, and post-Soviet culture); Polish literature, theatre, and culture in the twentieth century; Ukrainian romanticism, realism, modernism, and contemporary culture; South Slavic literatures and culture (Bosnian, Croatian, and Serbian); film studies, visual arts, theories of drama and performance; and Russian language pedagogy. For more details on the specialties of our faculty, see http://sites.utoronto.ca/slavic/people/faculty/faculty_index.shtml

Please follow this link for further details about the application process:

http://sites.utoronto.ca/slavic/graduate/grad_admission.html

or contact Associate Chair, Graduate, Prof. Kate Holland at kate.holland@utoronto.ca